

SOUTH STRUGGLES
FROM GREATEST OF DECADE'S DISASTERSSurvey of Section Stricken By Tornado Reveals 363 Bodies
Have Been Recovered

20 MILLION DAMAGE

Thousands Homeless; Hunger and Disease Follow
Terrible Storm

By International News Service

Torn by one of the greatest disasters in recent years, the South-land today struggled to press relief to tornado swept sections of six states.

A survey of stricken sections today revealed 363 bodies had actually been recovered and an unknown number of dead, still lying beneath the ruins of twisted, smoldering buildings.

At least two thousand others are suffering from injuries, and many of them are in such critical condition that they are expected to die.

Thousands of others are homeless and must be fed and clothed. Property damage has not yet been accurately estimated, but it is expected to approach the $20,000,000 mark. Hunger came in the wake of the storm, and disease and pestilence were constant threats.

As the toll of deaths mounted rapidly, authorities feared the loss of life would exceed the toll taken by the Florida hurricane of last September.

Bearing the brunt of the disaster, were Tupelo, Mississippi, where 188 are known to be dead; and Gainesville, Georgia, where 122 bodies have actually been counted, and an unknown number still lying beneath the smoldering ruins of the city. Both cities are under military control as civil and relief authorities struggled to bring order out of the chaos. The people are caring for the injured, and the homeless, and in acute cases, the injured were transferred to other cities. At Tupelo, the Frisco Railroad rushed 150 box cars into the town to provide temporary homes for the homeless.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Apr. 7.—(INS)—With the list of known dead mounting to startling figures and an undetermined number of bodies still lying beneath smoldering ruins, this tornado-wrecked city worked amid ever increasing difficulties today to bring some sort of order out of the chaos. The death list mounted so rapidly that even authorities were unable to keep track of the number of bodies actually recovered. Forty-seven of the victims of the storm were stacked in the basement of a Methodist church. More than that number were stacked high in the city's two undertaking parlors.

And many others, now known to be dead, are smoldering beneath the glowing ruins of the once proud cotton mill city.

Grim-faced rescue workers early this morning stated approximately 150 bodies had been recovered, and between 1,000 and 1,200 persons had been injured. Property damage was estimated by officials at more than $5,000,000.

Relief authorities asserted it will be several days before an accurate list of the dead and injured can be prepared. It was estimated that the death toll will amount to between two and three hundred.

Days will be required for a thorough search of the ruins, and many of the bodies buried beneath the burning ruins will never be found.

A wide swath nearly a mile long was moved through the heart of the business district, and hardly a building was left standing in the path of the storm. Brick structures several stories high toppled to the ground as though they had been made of cardboard.

REPUBLICANS URGING
MONEY, FLOOD CONTROL

Senator Davis and Others
Favor Large Appropriations

INTRODUCES A BILL

HARRISBURG, Apr. 7.—Senator James J. Davis and other Republicans in Congress, including Congressman I. H. Douthett, of Harrisburg, are urging large appropriations for flood relief and control in Pennsylvania.

Senator Davis has introduced a bill in the Senate asking that existing federal agencies be authorized to establish a Flood Rehabilitation Commission for the repair of damages caused by floods or other catastrophes. Such legislation, Senator Davis says, would permit home-owners, businessmen, corporations, public utility agencies and local government units to borrow on long term notes at low rates of interest, not to exceed four per cent, for rehabilitation purposes. The aggregate loans made under this act would not exceed $50,000,000.

Senator Davis is also supporting House Bills 12,014 and 11,968, which specify that loans for reconstruction work may be made from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and that the aggregate of loans of this nature shall not exceed $25,000,000. The loans could be made for damages incurred during the period from 1933 to 1937 but make no reference to amount of interest charged.

Writing to State Chairman M. Harvey Taylor, on the subject, Senator Davis said: "I have asked for a series of 13 reservoirs in the tributaries of the Upper Ohio; also for an auxiliary reservoir at Sharpville to supplement the Pymatung Dam and for levees on the Susquehanna. The 13 reservoirs would cost $70,000,000. The Commerce Committee has tentatively approved $55,000,000 for reservoirs and $33,000,000 for the levees. I am advocating more and am trying to get aid for the Sharpville Dam. A reservoir at this site would control about 55 per cent of the total Shenango basin."

Congressman I. H. Douthett is endeavoring to broaden the scope of the bill to provide relief for business persons and house owners who suffered in the flood. The House bill provides for secured loans of $25,000,000, with collateral security. Congressman Douthett holds that this requirement should be limited or removed for the reason that those who need help most would not be able to put up collateral. Many merchants would not be able to get help under the bill as it stands, he argues.

If Pennsylvania does not get needed flood relief and prevention funds it will not be because Republicans at Washington are not trying.

River Rises Two Feet

The Delaware river showed signs of going on another rampage yesterday when it raised two feet above normal at high tide at the Bristol Water Works.

The high tide is believed to have been caused by the high wind, and the basement of the filter house was flooded. One motor was moved.

At high tide this morning the river was nearer normal.

FIFTH WARD GIRLS

Fifth ward girls interested in the athletic events of Youth Week will meet at seven o'clock tonight behind the Harriman Hospital.

VIRGINIA PONE, Ward Leader.

FALLS FROM BICYCLE

Carman Angelo, 502 Pond street, suffered injuries when he fell from his bicycle while riding down Pond street, last evening. He was unconscious when taken to Harriman Hospital, but soon recovered. He also sustained brush burns of the left arm and left side of the body.

THREE-HOUR SERVICE

The three-hour service, from 12 noon to 3 p. m., at Christ Episcopal Church, Edgington, will occur on Good Friday, with manual by the Right Rev. Nathaniel S. Thomas, which has been used for the past six years, again being in use. Music will be rendered by Miss Gladys Gragg, newly appointed assistant organist, assisted by the combined senior and junior choirs. The members of the congregation may come and leave at various intervals.

MICHIGAN'S EXAMPLE

(New York American, April 7, 1936)

The chief grievance against President Roosevelt is not merely that he increased public expenditures during a critical emergency, but that he REFUSES TO LIVE UP TO HIS PROMISE to taper off after the emergency ended.

Governor Frank D. Fitzgerald, of Michigan, who has practiced economy in his own State, in his recent address in New York, put his finger on the crucial issue when he forcefully declared:

"Emergency policies cannot be continued beyond the time of emergencies without grave consequences."

Mr. Fitzgerald also punctured the illusion that the New Deal Administration is a beneficent Santa Claus.

He pointed out the obvious fact, which has been widely overlooked, that the Federal Government TAKES IN TAXES FROM THE CITIZENS OF THE STATES THE GIFTS WHICH IT RETURNS TO THE STATES.

And in doing so it deprives local citizens of the right of self-determination as to the use of the funds.

Getting down to cases, Governor Fitzgerald declared that the State of Michigan had sought Federal aid for the building of a needed hospital for the insane, but could not get it.

However, he added that the Federal Government has found a way—

"To spend our money for raking leaves and for building ponds to raise fish in. We believe we know how to make our dollars do their best work in our own State."

Governor Fitzgerald was NOT creating mere empty phrases.

His expressions of policy have been translated into frugal accomplishments in his own commonwealth.

The experience of Michigan and of other well managed States in throwing away "red ink" should hearten the American people and RESTORE FAITH IN OUR CAPACITY TO RECONCILE DEMOCRATIC SELF-GOVERNMENT WITH SOLVENCY.

Likewise, the record of such States as Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Indiana, Georgia and others demonstrates that IT CAN BE DONE.

ORDERS P. R. R. NOT TO RAISE SAND RATES

Increases Are Suspended From April 13th To June 30

FILE MANY PROTESTS

HARRISBURG, Apr. 7.—(INS)—The Public Service Commission announced today it has ordered the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to suspend its proposed increase of the freight rate on sand and gravel in carloads, from Morrisville, Bucks County, to Philadelphia points from April 13 to June 30.

Effective April 13, the railroad proposed to increase the rates from 55c a net ton to 80c a net ton. The increase was protested by several sand and gravel companies in separate complaints filed with the Commission last week.

Dredges Clearing
Channel of Debris

Two dredges are working in the Delaware River channel near White Hill and Fieldsboro to clear it of some 200,000 cubic yards of silt and debris deposited by the recent flood. It is expected that it will take a week to open the channel sufficiently to permit large-draft seagoing vessels to reach the Port of Trenton.

Only light-draft vessels can make their way to the Trenton Marine Terminal at the present time, Port Manager Arthur Dover said. Three Pacific Coast freight liners bearing cargoes for Trenton were forced to turn back at White Hill. For about a mile and a half the channel, which is normally 27 feet deep, has a depth of only 16 feet.

The channel is being cleared at the expense of the Federal Government under the supervision of Army engineers.

ENTERTAINED AT SUPPER

After attending a celebration of the "Sons of Italy" in their hall, Saturday evening, the following guests repaired to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carmalucci, of Wood street, where a delicious spaghetti supper was served:

Hon. Oliver W. Frey, wife and niece, Allentown; Samuel Korus, Allentown; Mr. and Mrs. J. Walter Parish, Croydon Manor; Mrs. John Keeley, Croydon; Mr. and Mrs. A. Poane, Bristol; John Worrell, Jr., and John Worrell, Sr., of Edgely; Mr. Fandozzi, and the Misses Poane and Camalucci, Bristol.

Home of Miss Paglione

The Gayety Girls held a meeting and social at the home of Elvira Paglione, 1011 Wood street, Saturday evening. The Misses Rose Navetta and Wilhelmina Peters were hostesses. Games and dancing were enjoyed, and refreshments served.

Those present: Clara Caucci, Violet Barron, Eva Farruggio, Fanny Martini, Yolanda Laperola, Florence Ciancioli, Fanny Tisione, Albina Camalucci, Rose Navetta, Alice Kwasoni.

Flood Relief to Benefit
By Sale of Refreshments

Funds received from sale of refreshments at the card party of Shepherds Delight Lodge, No. 1, Shepherds of Bethlehem, last evening, will be donated to the Red Cross for flood relief work. There were eight tables of players at the affair, held in F. P. A. hall, with Mrs. William Ennis in charge.

High scorers included: Pinochle, Mrs. Gilbert Lovett, 769; William Walton, 761; Mrs. Gerhart, 754; Mrs. I. Johnston Hetherington, 737; Mrs. Arthur Britton, 721. In "500", Mrs. David Neill, 2730; Mrs. Robert Patterson, 2620; Mrs. Warren Thompson, 2060; Mrs. Alfred McLaughlin, 2030.

TRANSFORMS ONE-ROOM
SCHOOL IN FIVE YEARS

Pebble Hill School Considered
a Model in Bucks County

STATE TAKES NOTICE

PEBBLE HILL, Apr. 7.—A transformation has been wrought at Pebble Hill one-room school in the period of the last five years, the said change being so unusual that state notice has been attracted.

The transformation is due to the teacher, Elizabeth D. Steinhauser, who has made of Pebble Hill a model school for one-room buildings.

When Mrs. Steinhauser came to Pebble Hill a few years ago, the boys and girls had no idea of conducting student council government or any other duties of a free-and-modern up-to-date school world.

For the benefit of recent guests the boys and girls held a session of Student Council. President Kathryn Tomlinson presided and Evelyn Inge served as secretary.

President Tomlinson heard reports from the Safety Squad, headed by Captain Tomlinson and his aides, Lieutenants Ely, Bailey and Kohl. If the members of their squads, enroute to and from school at morning and evening do not walk on the correct side of the highway or conduct themselves properly, the officer in charge will report the names of the offenders.

Reports on misdemeanors were given and the offenders "placed on the carpet" to testify in their own right.

The punishment, which the boys and girls mete out among themselves, is invariably more severe than that imposed by a teacher.

"If a defendant is penalized by having too many recesses taken away I serve as the referee, only interrupting to see that justice is carried out," said the teacher.

In a fashion which would have been a credit to adults, the boys and girls held their own tribunal. Everything was done, quietly—firmly nevertheless—and in an orderly manner. The boys and girls have their own student council constitution, with certain laws, and by operating under it develop a sense of responsibility.

The school is equipped with a phonograph, radio, piano, electric stove, which enables the students to enjoy hot meals, purchased from funds made by presenting a Christmas play. There are 18 students at the present time.

A complete library, including all the required books for the elementary grades, and reading table is a haven of delight for the literary minded boy or girl.

Because of the progressive School Board, it has enjoyed the benefit of a Class A standard rural school.

Mrs. Steinhauser, one of the eight Bucks countians who took part in a State rural program at Harrisburg, recently, is a graduate of West Chester State Teachers' College and is working for her degree at the University of Pennsylvania now.

One of the most original and unique ideas ever to be seen in any school room is a miniature post office.

The boxes bear small metal name plates and will hold anything from a Valentine party invitation, notes or birthday greetings. There is one particular compartment for the teacher in which the boys and girls may place anything personal or individual relative to school affairs.

Book service and current events clubs function regularly.

Carol Morgan, a fifth grader, heads the current events bulletin service—nothing other than one week on the bulletin board—activities which involves a meeting every Monday morning for discussions' sake, according to parliamentary law, and a bulletin board kept freshly covered with news, radio and rotogravure "stories."

Chairwoman Morgan selects weekly the pick of the current events materials submitted by her classmates.

"The Line of Time," a feature which is a history of mankind beginning shortly before the time of Christ, has been completed up to the period when the English are taking control of America, outlined in hand-printed lettering, covers two and one-quarter of the side walls near the ceiling.

This is a student project, interesting and original, and educational as well. It is planned to bring it up-to-date with the present Roosevelt administration.

Artistically, there are good free

Hanging In Connecticut

Wethersfield, Conn., Apr. 7.—The simple but deadly hanging machine at the Connecticut state prison smashed its 55th victim into eternity today and brought to a close 40 years of legal hangings in this state.

John Siemborski, the last victim of the machine, the only one of its kind in the country. He paid the supreme penalty for shooting to death Patrolman Walter Peolla, in New Haven, March 5, 1935.

Siemborski, saved two weeks ago by flood waters, which stood 18 inches deep in the execution chamber, died a few minutes after midnight. His arms and legs were buckled, a black hood adjusted over his head, and Deputy Warden Burdon J. Caswell, stepped on the button which released a 300-pound weight which sent Siemborski into eternity.

Marilyn Miller Dies

New York, Apr. 7.—Marilyn Miller, musical comedy star, who in private life was the wife of Chester O'Brien, died at 9:45 a. m. today in Doctors' Hospital here.

Miss Miller, who entered the hospital three weeks ago to recover from a nervous breakdown, developed a toxic condition, which caused her death.

Plan Drive for Funds To Benefit Victims of Flood

YARDLEY, April 6.—Under the chairmanship of James E. Groome, Sr., president of Yardley Lions Club, a citizens' meeting was held Sunday afternoon in the council chamber for the purpose of soliciting donations to be used specifically for the victims of the recent floods in this community. Clarence H. Harvey, assistant cashier of Yardley National Bank, was named as treasurer, while Vincent P. Casey served as secretary.

Augustus J. Cadwallader, a member of the Red Cross Committee, was present and stressed the need still prevalent in some homes in the community.

Solicitors were named to make personal visits to each home in the town for donations. Where such donations have already been made through the Red Cross, the church or clubs of the community, a second donation need not be given, but it is the desire that each person be given the opportunity to donate.

The territories and their solicitors include: North Main street, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bebbington; Main street, Afton to College avenue, Louis C. Leedom and Horace Eisenbrey; West College avenue, Warren R. Smith; Main street, College avenue to Vanhorn, Raymond Hampton and Morris Eisenbrey; South Main street to railroad, Harper avenue and Reading avenue, Mrs. C. C. Nelson and Mrs. Michael Derrick; Letchworth avenue, Eastburn avenue, and Canal street, James A. Dilliplane; River Mawr, David H. Anderson and Mrs. Joseph Yardley; West-over and Silver Lake Terrace, Michael Derrick and James E. Groome, Jr.; East Afton avenue and Delaware avenue to College, Chester Wetzstein; all streets from College avenue to the railroad, Francis Smith and Martin Heffern; West Afton avenue, Mrs. William M. Welch, 2nd.

The drive will finish on Thursday evening.

BUY FROM LOCAL STORES

The housewife usually regards the peddler who comes to her door as a nuisance. But half the time she encourages him by the upside-down process of "buying something to get rid of him." She finds it easier, in the individual instance, to buy a package of bad needles or a rubber apron which turns out to be a second than it is to listen to a stream of talk and force herself to argument as to why she should not buy.

Yet if all the housewives of Bristol were to unite in refusal to buy of the itinerant salesman for a year, they would find themselves left, long before the year was out, in peace and quiet to attend to their home duties without interruption and to do their marketing according to their own good judgment.

In one prosperous small city often victimized by this type of person, the merchants got together and issued a statement which may well be heeded here:

"Numerous complaints are being received from housewives who report that they have lost money through purchasing merchandise from unknown house-to-house peddlers. Professional swindlers who go from city to city have victimized thousands of housewives. Merchandise is misrepresented and, if delivered, is often inferior to samples shown. Advance payments are sometimes collected, the peddler vanishes and the merchandise is never received. Investigate before you buy or invest.

"Your responsible local merchants support all civic and public enterprises, pay taxes for the city's development and support, and give employment to thousands of hometown people. You can always see them personally for the adjustment of any mistakes.

"You are safe in buying from responsible local stores."

STERN MORALIST

Rumania has a new law governing marital relations, described as probably the most rigorous statute of its sort in the world. This law, indeed, extends to the preliminaries of marriage and provides three months' imprisonment for any ardent swain who tries to win the love of a girl by claiming more money or titles than he actually possesses.

More important than this curb on boastful suitors, however, is the part of the statute which declares infidelity legally established if a married man or woman possesses a love letter not written by his wife or her husband.

That seems a rather drastic definition of infidelity. But one better can understand the Puritanical zeal which animates Rumania's new law when one reads the name of the stern moralist who has set his royal hand and seal to this decree. In case you have forgotten, the king's name is Carol.

A Rome official says Italy's air fleet is in a position to sweep the Mediterranean, which must be pretty dirty after a long hard winter.

SUNDAY DINNER

Suggestions

By ANN PAGE

LOOKING forward to Easter we find eggs plentiful and cheap. That hams and turkeys are to be featured, that asparagus and artichokes, strawberries, pineapple and navel oranges are available for the feast.

For the previous days of fasting there will be ample supplies of fresh fish. In general beef and pork are somewhat cheaper, lamb a little higher and veal definitely expensive. Best values in vegetables can be found in beets, cabbage, carrots, lettuce and spinach. Beans, broccoli, cucumbers, peas and tomatoes are fairly high. Grapefruit and bananas represent the best fruit values.

Here are three Easter dinner menus at different budget levels.

SYNOPSIS

Ruth Tyler, blind daughter of former District Attorney Daniel Tyler, is psychic. She foretells murders at the exact time they are being committed but is powerless to give sufficient information to prevent them. These weird visitations come upon Ruth while she plays her violin and always at night. Mr. Tyler seeks the aid of Dr. Jan Karask, celebrated psychiatrist, but the latter must go to Baltimore on another case, so he assigns his young assistant, Nat Benson, to the job, suggesting that Tyler give Nat only Ruth's background and let him find out the details himself. Nat arrives at the old Tyler home on East 79th Street at midnight. He is puzzled when Tyler tries to explain that his daughter is a mental case but is not unbalanced. Suddenly the strains of a violin come in upon their conversation, stopping abruptly. Asking Nat to follow, Tyler rushes to Ruth's room where they find the girl terror-stricken. "It began—as always," she whispered. "And then—it stopped!" Tyler thinks it best for Ruth not to know she is being studied. At breakfast, next morning, Nat is introduced to her as the son of an old college chum, in the city on a visit. Nat is touched by Ruth's gentleness and beauty. She is a talented violinist and that night entertains Nat with her playing. In the middle of a love song, there is a crashing discord and the music ceases. "Murder!" she says hoarsely. "He is going to kill Mr. Roosevelt. . . . Now! . . . Five Shots! . . . Mr. Roosevelt is safe. . . . Words. . . . Missed Roosevelt! Glad I got Cermak!" Nat rushes to the radio and, sure enough, the announcement of the attempted assassination of the President-elect comes over the air. Ruth collapses. Nat partially explains the phenomenon by saying some persons have the power of receiving thoughts from the minds of others. Weeks pass and all is serene. Then one April night terror again grips Ruth.

CHAPTER VI

"There's murder in the air!" Ruth said, and for the first time since the vague dread had first made itself known in her mind, she knew what she must do. All at once, as if a shutter had been opened in her mind, to admit a flood of light, she was no longer afraid of her power. She welcomed it, determined to use it to its utmost.

For a fraction of a second she felt the strained nerves of her father and of Nat. Then she shut them out, completely. She did not even hear her father's sharp exclamation, nor Nat's warning, "Shhh!" She did not know that Nat had seized her father's arm, held him back from her. She moved her fingers slightly on the strings, waited, tense, nerves taut, every faculty sharp and clear.

It was very plain, that feeling. Murder in the air! As plain as it had been the night Zangara had made his wild attempt on the life of Mr. Roosevelt. But now her mind was much more aware of its import. She stood rigid, waiting—waiting for the words which would tell her who was in danger.

Then they began to come: Death. . . . Death and hate. . . . Vengeance. . . . Fear. . . . Lust for gain. . . . Her nerves were quivering on the quiver for the name. It must come now. . . . It had to come! But there was some barrier, some disturbance. She tried to shut it out. But it intruded, exasperatingly.

She heard her father's voice: "Ruth! Ruth! For God's sake what is it?" And Nat's frantic: "Mr. Tyler! Let her alone! Please!" Then her father's arms were about her; and the thing like a shutter came back over her mind.

"Ruth," her father was saying, intently, "who is it? Who's in danger?" She felt him shake her. "You've got to know, Ruth!"

She gave a shuddering moan. "Oh, I don't know. I don't know," she cried.

"Ruth," her father said. "Try!" "It's no use now—no use," she said helplessly. Then she heard Nat's voice, bitter and exasperated: "You've spoiled everything, Mr. Tyler! My lord, are you insane? Let the girl alone!" But it was too late. Her father's arms relaxed. She stood alone and free, heard him muttering, half-apologetically, but it was too late now.

emotions: Contrition for his interference—fear for Ruth—concern for the unknown person in danger. . . . What if it should be Ruth herself! He groaned and ran his hands through his hair. What a fool he was! Well, the damage was done. He must get hold of himself.

He stopped his restless pacing, forced himself to undress, get into bed. He lay with his ears strained, fearful of hearing that music commence—and then stop! And just as fearful that it would not. There could be no peace, no rest for him now, until Ruth knew. . . .

Nat did not undress. He was convinced that the girl would play again, sometime during that night. And equally sure that unless murder had already been done, she would get the danger-signal once more. He arranged a reading-light by the open door, placed his chair so that he could see Ruth's door at the end of the hall at all times.

He made himself read a novel, but he kept his ears alert; when the time came, he would get to Ruth before her father could reach her. . . .

Ruth lay very quietly in her bed, waiting. She heard her father come up the stairs, recognized the so-familiar footsteps. And her super-sensitive ears caught the vibrations of his restless pacing. Her heart went out to him, but she lay still, waiting. She heard Nat come upstairs too, heard him moving the chair, the lamp, knew that he was keeping vigil. That knowledge warmed and heartened her.

She was thankful when she realized that her father had stopped his agonized staking of the floor. She hoped he would sleep. She would not sleep if she could—and could not if she would. The hours passed slowly. In her mind she groped for the shutter which would let in the light—until she realized that it was beyond her power to open it.

No, the shutter had to be opened from the outside. And when that realization had become very clear to her, she knew that it would open, soon. . . . presently she knew that it was time. Very quietly she got up, felt for her violin. She would play it very, very softly, hoping not to wake her father. Nat would hear it, of course. But Nat would not interfere.

She tucked the violin under her chin. It was a wonderful instrument, a very old Amati said to have once been the property of the Italian magician, Castiglione. She poised the bow, waited for the utter compulsion to play. It came almost at once. Gently she drew the bow across the strings. And in her mind the shutter slowly opened, and the light came in. She stopped, her fingers taut on the strings.

At the first sound Nat was out of his chair. He stood waiting, unwilling to allow a single footfall to break the tension. Then the music stopped, and Nat started swiftly down the hall. He heard Tyler's door open. The man was coming too. Nat reached the door first, opened it swiftly but quietly, switched on the light. Tyler crowded close behind him. Nat flashed him a warning look, and Tyler nodded, humbly. They stood tense, still, staring at the girl. If she realized their presence, she gave no sign. Then she began to speak:

"The man marked for death is Paul Y. Gordon," Ruth said.

"Gordon. . . . Gordon. . . . The name is Gordon. . . ."

Tyler started to open his lips, but Nat's swift pressure of his arm restrained him from speech. Both men were thinking the same thing: Gordon! A common name. There are many Gordons!

Ruth stood as before, waiting. . . . Would nothing come but that name, Gordon? She resolutely shut all thought from her mind, kept it open, as completely receptive as she was able, and waited. The feeling of another's hate that came to her was a malevolent, malignant thing. Yet it was not afraid now. It was a different kind of hate from that of Zangara. That had been a fanatic, almost maniacal thing. This was colder, even more evil, but controlled, cunning, careful. It was planning death for this Gordon; that, she knew. But the will was not yet ready to translate the plan into action. It was a waiting hate.

And then she got the complete name, in a flash, as if that hate were dictating it, glacially: Paul Gordon. . . . Paul Y. Gordon. That was all she wanted now. She was aware, completely, then, of the presence of Nat and her father. She dropped her bow, turned to them quickly.

"The man marked for death is Paul Y. Gordon," she said.

"Are you sure?" said Nat gently. "Quite sure," she said, in her most natural voice.

"There is only one Paul Y. Gordon that I know of," said Tyler. "The international banker?" Nat said.

Tyler nodded. "I'll get him on the phone," Nat said.

He thumbed through the Manhattan telephone-book. There was no Paul Y. Gordon listed.

"Either he has a private, unlisted wire, or he lives in the country," Nat said. He dialed information, and was told, after a time, that there was a Paul Y. Gordon listed in Westchester. He took down the number and dialed the operator. . . .

NAMES in the NEWS

ONE of the first things a cub reporter learns is that names make news. There are two kinds of names which make news. Names of people. And names of things—products and services—things which touch you more closely than the thunderings of a Senator or the escapades of a Prince.

Look through the advertisements in this newspaper and you'll see names you've known most of your life. Dependable names—names that stand for value—announcing improvements in quality, improvements in service, new and better ways to perform old household tasks, ways to save money and raise your standard of living.

Follow the news those names are making, day after day. Read the advertisements regularly, and use them as millions of other people are doing—to keep up-to-date in the world of goods and services; to save time, effort and trouble in shopping; to help budget your expenditures and get the most for your money.

STYLES FOR SPRING ALLOW EVERY WOMAN CHOICE IN CLOTHES

By Rhadenia A. Armstrong

(Home Economics Representative)

Spring styles are a study in contrasts. In all this variety it will be possible for every woman to select garments and colors which enhance her best features and minimize her shortcomings.

An important change is the return of the broad-shouldered look. This is usually done by the addition of fullness at the top of the sleeves, but it also is obtained by more intricate cut at shoulder and sleeve line, by yokes, shoulder bands, or epaulets and wide collars. Strangely enough, and here is the first contrast, if you wish a smooth-fitting shoulder you may have it and be as smart as your broad-shouldered sister.

Thirteen inches from the floor is the new skirt length. However, if this makes the skirt look too short for the figure, 11 or 12 inches should be the choice.

For the slender figure the pencil-skirt may be chosen, but more women will find a skirt with pleats (the newest fullness) or godets more flattering and practical and at the same time equally desirable from the fashion point of view.

Never has there been a greater variety of suit fashions: Jackets may be short, nipped in at the waist, belted with a short peplum, or short full swag. For the extremely tailored type, the man-tailored suit is the extreme of fashion. As a contrast to this is the short bolero.

Skirt and jacket may be of contrasting material—an idea for improving upon a garment you already have, and making an ensemble.

Fullness is made by soft gathers on the yokes, by tucks inside or outside, dart tucks, and pleats—knife, butterfly or box pleats.

As usual, bright color accents are obtained by hand bag, flower, purse, gloves, belt, or other accessories.

hand water color pictures done by boys and girls of the fifth and seventh grades. First graders have made photographs of George Washington using real cotton for the hair of the Father of the Country.

A more advanced exhibition is that of "Washington and His Life" in which there is a Betsy Ross scene showing Washington and Old Glory for the initial time, and a scene of Washington praying, with artificial snow pasted on a water color background adding a real snow-like lustre.

Pennmanship folders, with examples of each students' progress in writing from September until June, are kept and compared at the end of the term.

For the tiny tots, who take their history by means of play, there is a fine exhibit of a study of Holland. The background contained a typical Dutch landscape executed by a youngster while others made the ducks, Dutch boys and girls, and arranged moss and windmills to carry out the details.

The month of March was dedicated to Holland replete with tulips and a Spring motif.

While the boys and girls were studying medieval history, they constructed castles, made out of oatmeal boxes, which served as the towers, with a drawbridge all of which were covered with paper and decorated to resemble stone like structures.

A monastery is also included in the collection and although the study is finished the boys and girls thought so much of their own creations they decided to save them for decorative purposes.

Each Puff Less Acid A LIGHT SMOKE

OF RICH, RIPE-BODIED TOBACCO

Over a period of years, certain basic advances have been made in the selection and treatment of cigarette tobaccos for Lucky Strike Cigarettes.

They include preliminary analyses of the tobacco selected; use of center leaves; the higher heat treatment of tobacco ("Toasting"); consideration of acid-alkaline balance, with consequent definite improvement in flavor; and controlled uniformity in the finished product.

All these combine to produce a superior cigarette—a modern cigarette, a cigarette made of rich, ripe-bodied tobaccos—A Light Smoke.

MATCH-MAKER MOFFO WORKING ON CARD

Match-maker Patsy Moffo is working on the next amateur boxing show to be conducted by the St. Ann's Athletic Association in the Italian Mutual Aid Hall, Monday, April 13th. The bouts will be sanctioned by the Middle Atlantic District of the A. A. U. Tickets for the show will go on sale tonight.

Moffo is arranging for Tony Puccio, Vince Delia, Sammy Baiocchi, Tony Maglione, Johnny Rucagno, Harry Davis, Phil Quici, Joe Zettler, Jules Zeffries, and Chet Castor. It is Moffo's intention to have the best boxing show ever accorded the fans in this vicinity. The last boxing show put on by the local organization was a patched-up affair.

Harry Davis, local colored star, who injured a rib in his last appearance here with Eddie Miller, Kensington, is training again and will attempt to be in shape for the fight. Sammy Baiocchi has requested Match-maker Moffo to secure Joe Campagna, Mason, as his opponent. Campagna defeated Baiocchi recently. Tony Puccio is asking for Ralph Mazzone, who kayeod Baiocchi in the last bouts.

POOL TOURNAMENT

John Korkel, who was thought of as a chump by one of Bristol's best pool shooters, came through in fine style by taking over "Henny" Morgan for the pool championship of Bristol. In the semi-final Korkel defeated Stong who up to the time had defeated pool shooters like Palermo, Manero and Kendig. The final score was: Korkel, 75; Morgan, 49.

While reminiscing on the exploits of the old Bristol Athletic Association's great football teams of 1923-4-5-6 and 7 with a friend the other evening... the subject came up on what the players were doing now... If we had seen any of the old boys and what they looked like now that their active playing days were over.

Well to tell the truth when we met Joe Holmes, that great full-back from Jersey, he looked like the side of a house... We asked him what he was doing for a living and he informed me that he had a fine ice business in Toms River with several trucks on the road.

Ralph Heist, the big lineman from Frankford, is on the police force in Philadelphia. Jess Mattlack, star center from Lansdowne, is a broker in the wool business. Bill Stringfellow, the half-pint quarterback, is employed by a large concern in Mount Holly as a chemist. Happily married and no longer a player.

Jack Carr, rip-roaring fullback and great favorite with the fans, is a corporal in the State Police, stationed in the coal regions... Eddie Glennon, another halfback, is connected with Hardwick and McGee, rug manufacturers, in the sales department... Big Alex Smith, the 250-lb. guard, is a night club operator in Jersey... Ernie Lawrence, former star tackle and coach, is a certified public accountant in business for himself.

His partner in the tackle position, Fred King, is in Europe at the present time, traveling for a large American oil company... Buck Weaver is buyer for Strawbridge and Clothier, while Al Bauer, captain of one of the better teams, is in the freight rate department of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Philadelphia... Al, incidentally, is in great physical condition due to his paddling activities with a Tacony Canoe Club.

Frank Black, coach and line-man, is a politician in Trenton and holds the job of Inspector of Weights and Measures... Among the local boys, Johnny Conca is connected with Sears, Roebuck & Co... Al Lippincott, center, is an electrical welder with the Pacific Steel Company... J. S. Fine is a successful bottler... Frank Cook still plays baseball in the Burlington County League.

Harry Weissblatt is a writer on a Philadelphia newspaper... We have lost all contact with the greatest player of them all, Bobby Carty, also that big, blonde, plunging backfield ace, Harry Ingram... while Bud Pearson, another local star of former days, is a chemist in Rohm & Haas.

What a bunch of ball players... across every one of them, and how they brought glory to this old town when they donned the old Blue and Gold uniforms and went to town!... Would that we had another group like them.

"Picture Athletes" of Sports

By BURNLEY

Every once in a while a sport luminary flashes across the horizon who has the ideal combination of perfect stylistic form and dynamic competitive fire.

All too often the stylists of sport lack the winning spark, and lose out to less graceful but more determined foemen. Today, however, there are several dominating sport figures who are real "picture athletes."

Venzke, Louis, Gehring, Von Cramm, and a few others are master stylists who can win in an effortless and graceful fashion that makes their competitive endeavors a joy to watch.

Gene Venzke, smooth running Penn ace, played second fiddle to the awkward but powerful Cunningham for several years, but he has come into his own at last. Though he lost to Glenn once again in one of the final indoor races of the season, the Penn stylist decisively trounced his rival in masterful fashion in the most important indoor events.

Flintian perfect athlete, Joe Louis, destroys his ring foes with the deadly, catlike grace of a tiger. He has such beautiful ring form that he doesn't seem to be punching hard, yet his opponents crumble like dead men when struck.

Following the glorious second base tradition of Napoleon Lajoie, we have baseball's most graceful performer, Charley Gehring, of Detroit. And the turf comes forward with that picture horse, Brevity, whose space-devouring stride is the very poetry of motion.

ODDS FAVOR EASTERN ENTRY IN '36 DERBY

By C. L. Reece
L. N. S. Staff Correspondent

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Apr. 7—(INS)—East or West, whose horse is best? That, with apologies to poets who are seldom associated with the art of horse grooming and odds making, sums up the pre-Derby gossip making the rounds of the barbershops, the corner bookstore and even the finely appointed parlors in the Bluegrass State.

Right now the East has the edge in winter odds with Brevity, Joseph E. Widener's fleet-footed sure contender for most any track trophy. Brevity's sharp favoritism was well earned in two brilliant performances this year, and the horses who take the barrier beside him will have to do some fancy stepping.

Up in those cherished upper brackets of acclaim is another Eastern product, Tintagel, owned by Marshall Field. This colt, who copied the Belmont Futurity, has been favored by steady seasonings in Florida and should be as fit as Brevity when the Derby is run at Churchill Downs May 2.

Next among the Eastern contingent is Ned Reigh, a worthy contender owned by Willis Sharpe Kilmer.

The West presents a sparkling quartet in Hal Price Headley's Hollywood, C. C. Shaffer's Coldstream, Bohn and Markey's Grand Slam and E. R. Bradley's Bien Joli.

The strong competition being offered by the East again this year recalls the days when the Derby, by no particular design, had the Derby practically to itself. It was not until 1911, thirty-six years after Aristides won the first Kentucky classic, that the East staked out a claim in the Downs turf. R. F. Carmen brought Meridian to the colorful Kentucky oval that year and he showed oversized heels to Governor Gray and other western hopefuls.

R. C. Hallenbeck followed with another eastern victory with Worth in 1912.

The West then calked up a deuce with T. P. Hayes' Donerail in 1913 and H. C. Applegate's Old Rosebud in 1914.

Then with a bang the East came back for more, and got it in 1915 with Harry Payne Whitney's Regret, the only filly ever to win the Derby; John Sanford's George Smith in 1916; Billings & Johnson's Omar Khayyam in 1917, and Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Extremator in 1918.

In 1919, Sir Barton, owned by Commander J. K. L. Toss, of Canada, was first, and in 1920 Rai Parr's Paul stepped.

Old Farm straight rye whiskey is so rich and heavy-bodied—it gives you 3 drinks for the price of 2, when you buy by the bottle. Twenty months old. Bars and stores.

Jones took the honor back to the East. Col. E. R. Bradley sent to the post the first of his four Derby winners in 1921, running one, two with Belave Yourself and Black Servant. The East came back in 1922 with Morvich, owned by Benjamin Black, and followed with Zev, belonging to H. P. Sinclair. Mrs. R. M. Hoot, of the West, triumphed in 1924 with Black Gold; the East with G. A. Cochran's Flying Ebony in 1925; the West in 1926 with Colonel Bradley's Bubbling Over; the East in 1927 with Mr. Whitney's Whiskery; the West in 1928 with Mrs. J. D. Hertz's Reigh Count; the East in 1929 with H. P. Gardner's Clyde Van Deusen, in 1930 with William Woodward's Gallant Fox, and in 1931 with Mrs. Payne Whitney's Twenty Grand.

Colonel Bradley then scored two in a row for the West with Broker's Tip and Burgoon King. Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane took the classic in the East's name with Cavalcade in 1934, and William Woodward tallied his second for the East with Omaha last year.

A graph showing the see-saw trend of the East-West battle might scientifically disclose which section's horse would pari mutuelly be the most sensible wager, but there's Brevity, and there's Bien Joli, and there's So and So and Which'll It Be, and take it from the stables, it could be a dead heat.

PAPER MAKERS WIN OVER B. B. C. BOWLERS

Paper Mill of the Bristol Bowling League took over the pace-setting B. B. C. Club for three points. David Arnold led the paper-makers with a total of 538. "Teller" Ratcliffe was high for B. B. C. with 543.

Andalusia Scouts Win First Place; Score 27 Points

sented rubber lead pencils, lady surprises, rubber cigars, and a varied assortment of other April Fool "knicks-knacks." He was very kind with the first place winners by presenting them with Easter eggs, and the second place winners with Easter bunnies. He was "heartbreaking" to the third place winners by giving them a large bag with a single jelly bean. The Sells-Perk "put over" the first up-county Seascout activity with a punch plus. Seascouting believed in a sensible appreciation of the interest the young men have in young women. The activities of the Seascouts have always included the attendance of the young women of the Seascouts. The April Fool Party, Saturday evening, gave the Mermaids their first opportunity for competing events, and scoring for their Ships.

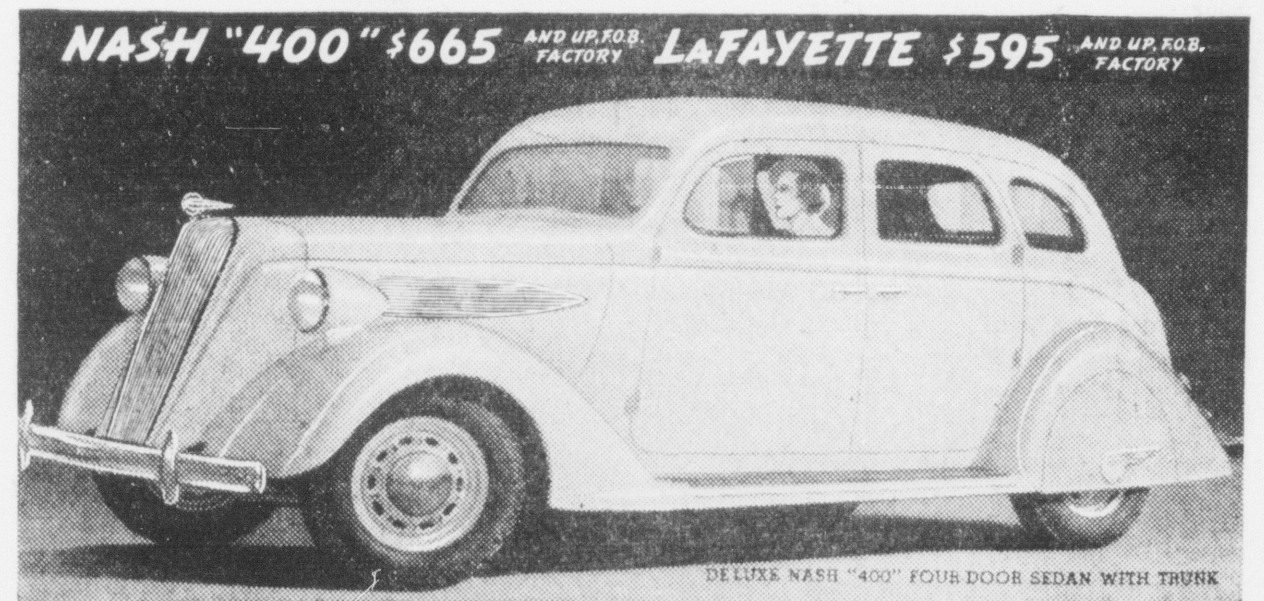

Place winners by events were: Jelly Bean Shoot: Joseph Bound, Andalusia; second, George Crouthamel, Sells-Perk; and third, James Wolf, Morrisville. Egg Whistle: Joseph Bound, Andalusia; second, Francis Birkelback, Andalusia; and third, James Wolf, Morrisville. Rope Skip: Miss Marion Morrison, Andalusia; second, Miss Frances Bunting, Morrisville; third, Miss Ethel Hartman, Andalusia. Egg Rolling: William McGovern, Croydon; second, Frank Sweitzer, Croydon; and third, James Wolf, Morrisville. Hop Race: Jack Mossbrook, and Palmer Hotherman, of Croydon; second, Francis Birkelback, and Joseph Bound, of Andalusia; and third, Leonard Herman, and William Lyndall, of Bristol. Rabbit Ear: Miss Betty Perkins, Croydon; second, Miss Grace Freed, Sells-Perk; and third, Miss Dorothy Flack, Morrisville.

The flashing close of the evening's fun events was the game of Rabbit Ball. The teams were led by Captain Leonard Herman of Bristol for the Andalusia, Morrisville and Bristol Ships. Captain for Croydon and Sells-Perk was Jack Mossbrook of Croydon. With teams of seven players, and left hand throw with a rabbit (stuffed), it was a close contest. Nobody could equal the decisions of "Ump" Hendricks, and "Base Ump" Bittle. Decisions were close, occasionally questioned, happily and unhappily accepted.

Captain Herman had a three run lead at the end of the first inning, and was fortunate to have his teammates score another run, giving them four at the beginning of the second. This was too much for the team of "Cap" Mossbrook, and they came through with four runs, tying the game at the end of the second inning. They did even better by taking two more runs to the one of Herman's team at the close of the third. This gave the combined teams from Croydon and Sells-Perk the lead at the beginning of the fourth with a score of 6 to 5. Their previous good work was too much for their playing in the closing of the fourth inning. They "let up"; this was their undoing. The combined team from Andalusia, Bristol and Morrisville circled the bases six times in the fourth to give them the lead at 11 to 6. Every effort was made by the Croydon-Sells-Perk combination to "take home the bacon," but they were only able to "fry" two runs, losing the game, 11 to 8.
